Privacy Policy

Aepodia honors your privacy. Although most of the information on this site can be accessed without providing any personal information, there may be instances when the user is asked to provide personal information. This information will be used only for customer management and to keep you informed about our activities. The user has the right at any time, at no cost and upon request, to prohibit the use of his information for the purpose of direct marketing. If you wish to do so, please contact Aepodia. Your personal information is never passed on to third parties. Pursuant to the law passed on 08/12/1992 governing the processing of personal information, the user has the legal right to view and, if necessary, correct his personal information. Upon submission of proof of identity (copy of identity card), you are entitled to receive a free copy of your personal information by sending a written, signed and dated request to info@aepodia.com. If necessary, you may also request that any information which is not correct, complete or relevant be changed.

Aepodia may collect anonymous or aggregated data which are of a non-personal nature, such as browser type or IP address, the operating system you use or the domain name of the website you used to go to or depart from the Aepodia website. This enables us to continually provide an optimal website experience for our users.
